FIGHTING ANTIBIOTIC RESISTANCE
TODAY AND TOMORROW

As part of World Antibiotic Awareness Week, we are holding our annual flagship event The Great British Tea Party, giving you the perfect excuse to pop the kettle on, grab your friends, family and colleagues and indulge in a delicious slice, or two, of cake and raise vital funds for antibiotic research.

Your Tea Party can be as large or small as you want and can be held anywhere - at your workplace, in your home, your local community hall, your local hospital - in fact anywhere there's a kettle. World Antibiotic Awareness Week takes place 18th - 24th November so why not make a week of it! What's not to love about tea and cake?!

EMILY'S STORY

Young mum Emily Morris, has lived with antibiotic-resistant bacteria for a decade.

"I carry a resistant strain of E. coli known as ESBL E. coli. I'm only 26, and if you look at how many antibiotics I've gone through, I'm already coming close to the end ones. By the time I'm 40, I still want to have antibiotics left. But if they don't find new solutions, it is inevitable that one day I will run out."

Antibiotic Research UK is the first and only UK charity formed specifically to tackle the problem of antibiotic resistance.

By taking part in the Great British Tea Party, you'll be doing something brilliant - the money raised from your Tea Party will go towards our mission of:

- Developing new antibiotic therapies by early 2020's
- Educating the public and professionals about antibiotic resistance
- Providing patient information and support.

From all of us here at Antibiotic Research UK, a great big thank you!
